Paul Gerhardt

Paul Gerhardt lived from 1607-1676. He lived during a great time of Lutheran Orthodoxy and with this came its many worldly struggles. Gerhardt wrote the hymn, “A Lamb Goes Uncomplaining Forth,” in the context of his life of suffering during the devastation of the Thirty Years’ War and later church conflicts, which deeply shaped his emphasis on Christ’s willing sacrifice and the believer’s trust in God in affliction. In a paper on the hymnwriter, President Schmeling writes, “Paul Gerhardt was the greatest German hymnist of the seventeenth century. Along with Luther he is regarded as one of the greatest hymn writers in all of Lutheranism. More of his lyrics have made their way into the English language than those of any other German writer and their popularity continues to increase. His 139 hymns and poems are indispensable part of the Christian heritage. In his hymns and other writings, the Gospel always predominates as he applies that Gospel truth to the burdens and struggles of the Christian’s life. He faced the Christian cross, and his hymns offer comfort as we face the Christian cross. His enemies considered him to be as thickheaded as a mule and as stubborn as one, but his friends knew that his strong convictions were based on the salvific Word of the Lord. This divine, sifted in Satan’s sieve, is indeed the sweet singer of Lutheranism” (Schmeling, Gaylin R. “Paul Gerhardt: Pastor and Theologian”).
